Press summer
intern starts today

The Crittenden Press will offer a new face around town this summer.

Becca Schimmel, a senior journalism major at Murray State University, started a 10-week internship with the newspaper starting today (Thursday).

The 2011 graduate of Henry Clay High School in Lexington will be covering a variety of local news this summer.

The internship is offered through the Kentucky Press Association.

Schimmel serves as a copy editor for the Murray State News and completed an internship with The Paducah Sun last year. She is minoring in psychology and expects to graduate in December.

AOC to survey courthouse needs

Kentucky Supreme Court Justice Bill Cunningham and a representative from the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) in Frankfort will be in Marion today (Thursday) to survey safety and accessibility issues at Crittenden County Courthouse. Similar issues have been raised in the past, and state officials have conducted prior on-site inspections, but the problems facing the local courthouse were brought to light again recently by 5th Judicial Circuit Judge Rene Williams. Chief among the problems are handicapped accessibility to all floors of the courthouse, safety issues with regard to limited ingress and egress to the courtroom on the upper floor and an aged HVAC system.

AOC rents space from the county for courtroom space, judges' chambers and circuit clerks' offices. AOC rents approximately 55 percent of Crittenden County Courthouse.

Hurricane Camp revival continues

Hurricane Camp Meeting continues through Sunday with a non-denominational, old-fashioned revival and meal each night. This is the 127th year for the event, which began Monday. Chris Brantley is the evangelist for this year's camp meeting on the grounds of Hurricane Church near Tolu. Evening worship begins at 7 p.m. in the open-air tabernacle following a meal served at 5:30 p.m. The meal is $8.50 and includes a salad, vegetables and dessert with the nightly entree. Special music is also brought by different groups each night of the revival.

Meetings

- Marion City Council will meet at 6 p.m. Monday at Marion City Hall.

- Crittenden Fiscal Court will meet at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the judge-executive's chambers at the courthouse. Passage of a budget for the new fiscal year beginning July 1 is expected.

- Crittenden Health Systems Board of Directors will meet at 6 p.m. next Thursday at the hospital administrative annex board room.

Beavers create ingenious work of natural art

It was like a scene from National Geographic, a nature feast my husband and I enjoyed almost every day as we leisurely golf-carted to the back of our woods. That year, the creek that meandered through our farm and the neighboring property had undergone an amazing transformation. Supplied by two underground springs, the location had been turned into a perfect wetland habitat. Geese, ducks, turkeys, cranes, deer and all manner of wildlife lived and thrived together in their unique water world, all thanks to the North American beaver.

Nothing could have prepared me for the industrious nature of the beaver.

"How do they do that?" I asked Eddie.

From one month to the next, trees came down and lodges went up. The most fascinating to me was the way they cut down trees. From small saplings to big poplars, their razor teeth worked in a circular motion, rivaling the best power-saw built today.

Eager to learn all I could about them, I read about the second largest rodent in the world and his crafty engineering skills. I watched a video that tracked an industrious family of beavers over the course of a year.

The male and female worked together, first building a lodge to raise their offspring. Constructed with the same materials as the dams, they housed approximately four adults and six to eight juveniles. Late each autumn, they covered their lodges with fresh mud, which froze and hardened, thereby preventing predators like coyotes, wolves and wolverines from entering the lodge.

Vented in the top, the lodge provides adequate circulation – cool in summer, warm in winter. Contrary to popular belief, beavers actually dig out their dens with underwater entrances after they finish building the dams and lodge structures. There are typically two dens within the lodge, one for drying off after leaving the water and another in which the family lives.

Once their home is in order, the dams are built. They start by placing vertical poles into the creek bed, then filling in between them with a crisscross of horizontally-placed branches. Then they apply a combination of weeds and mud until the dam holds sufficient water to surround the lodge, providing easy access to food during winter.

Beavers always work at night and are prolific builders, carrying mud and stones with their forepaws and timber between their teeth. Mama watches, well out of danger, as Papa cuts.

From our vantage point, they would slap their tails on the water as they tried unsuccessfully to scare us off. At first, I thought someone was shooting at us! Actually, it was their tails slapping the surface as they dove under water, where they can spend as long as 15 minutes. The slapping of the water sent a warning to

All that hard work. How could they have known it would all be destroyed in a matter of days? More importantly to us, where did the beavers go?

In only two years, due to their strong resilience, the beavers reappeared and other beavers around them. Eventually, they got used to us. We were their friends.

But, not everyone admired them like we did. The beavers' harvesting of trees and flooding of waterways sometimes interferes with other land uses. However, observation for hundreds of thousands of years in the Northern Hemisphere have shown the beavers keep water systems healthy and in good repair. Naturally, a human observing all the downed trees might think that the beavers were doing just the opposite.

Unfortunately, in 2011, when the Ohio River flooded our area, massive amounts of water ran over into the tributaries off Deer Creek. Not only were people and their homes affected, the beavers disappeared when their environment was washed away.

All that hard work. How could they have known it would all be destroyed in a matter of days? More importantly to us, where did the beavers go?

Would they ever rebuild? A few weeks later, Eddie got the golf cart out, and we went on our ride-around. The day was beautiful and warm.

As he turned to go over by the creek, we were surprised to see the water level rising.

"Look, Linda," Eddie said. "I think they're damming up the water again."

He made his way through the woods and over to where he could get a good view downstream.

"They're back, all right!"

Then, he drove me to where I could get a good view of the new lodge and dam under construction, now on our side of the property.

To some people, it might look like a messy pile of mud and sticks, but we saw it as an ingenious work of art. It had worked out well for all concerned. We would continue to have our private wildlife viewing area and the beavers would have a safe home site with us as long as nature cooperated.

High school offering its students fast track to higher education through multiple options

By JASON TRAVIS

STAFF WRITER

Placing students on the fast track to higher education is a primary goal at Crittenden County High School.

At the May 12 Crittenden County Board of Education meeting, school district Instructional Supervisor Diana Lusby and high school principal Curtis Brown discussed two options students and their parents can consider when planning for college. Both options offer pros and cons parents and students should carefully consider.

CCHS is offering an early graduation option for a select group of students that meet specific criteria. Officials said this track is not something they necessarily encourage for most students, but for students who qualify, it is an option both they and their parents can discuss with school officials.

The purpose of early graduation is to provide academically high-achieving students with an option to move more quickly through high school. It allows students to graduate from high school college ready in three years or less. School officials said there is a two-year and three-year option. Once students graduate they are eligible for acceptance into a two- or four-year college.

Academic requirements for early graduation include meeting ACT benchmarks set forth by the Council on Post-Secondary Education. In addition, students have to meet proficiency benchmarks on end of course exams, such as those for English II, Algebra II, Biology and U.S. History.

But the option isn't as easy at first glance. School officials stressed this option would be for students who are self-motivated, have a good attendance record and are academically and socially mature enough to be enrolled in high school courses with older students. Also parents need to consider if they are financially ready to send their child to college early. Parents and students need to consider scholarships and other opportunities that could be beneficial by staying the full four years of high school. They would also need to consider their Career and Technical Education Pathway and determine if they would miss out on those pathways if they didn't stay the full four years of high school.

Students who choose this track would have to be willing to forego traditional high school activities such as athletics, prom and other after school or extracurricular activities.

Parents would need to decide if their child would better benefit from taking advanced level or dual credit courses while remaining at CCHS. Dual credit provides the option of obtaining college credit while still enrolled as a high school student. Students also get to experience high school activities while adding college credit.

Middle and high school students interested in an early graduation option need to notify their guidance counselor, who would set up a meeting with the early graduation committee. Then a meeting with parents and students would be scheduled to explain the criteria for the program and to map out their individual pathway.

There are financial incentives for families that choose this option. They are eligible for a one-time scholarship to be used for the academic year immediately following early graduation. It's good for any Southern Association of Colleges and Schools-accredited public or private university in Kentucky. That award is equal to half of the statewide per pupil guarantee. School officials said this past year that would have been $1,955. They are also eligible for their Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES) money. KEES award money is based on a student's grade-point average each year in high school. There is a bonus for high ACT scores. Students who graduate in three years would be eligible for four years of KEES money.

Dual credit courses are administered two ways. Some classes are taught by CCHS teachers in which students earn high school and college credit at the same time. Examples include English 101, 102 and Advanced Topics.

Another way to earn dual credit is by taking courses online. School officials said typically these courses are one semester courses and students are encouraged to commit to two semesters of enrollment in a particular course of study.

School officials cautioned that these courses are a big adjustment for students. Limited assistance is available and communications with off-campus instructors is usually via email. Being college courses, deadlines for course work is also stricter.

Also snow days don't affect online courses. For example, if CCHS misses one week of school because of a winter storm, students enrolled in online courses will still be expected to keep up with their course work.

Online courses do require fees that vary by subject. Information on fees can be obtained at the high school.

Advantages for taking dual credit courses include graduating from high school and having also obtained several college credit hours; students get to remain at CCHS and have the full high school experience and money can be saved on the total cost of a college education.

Middle and high school parents interested in either of these advanced track options should contact the high school at (270) 965-2248 to learn more information.

NEWS BRIEFS

County finally OK'd for fed disaster aid

Upon appeal, Crittenden County has now been approved for federal disaster relief related to one of the two winter storms that hit Kentucky in February and March. Earlier this spring, the county was omitted from the initial list of dozens of Kentucky counties approved for assistance for either or both of the storms through presidential authorization.

"Our appeal was successful for one of the two storms," said Crittenden County Judge-Executive Perry Newcom. "I believe that they approved the first storm, but I have not gotten confirmation on which storm we will be reporting. I was just happy they approved at least one."

Each storm cost the county tens of thousands of dollars for overtime, material and equipment. Now approved for assistance, federal funding will be available to Crittenden Fiscal Court under FEMA's Public Assistance Program.

Flag Day ceremony slated for Saturday

Livingston County Historical Society will be hosting a Flag Day ceremony at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the historic courthouse in Smithland.

The celebration of the flag comes a day before the official holiday, but the meaning is just the same. Spencer and Linda Brewer will tell the history of Old Glory and display a collection of various American flags. There will also be tributes to men and women from Livingston County who have served their country in the military. A program of patriotic and war-era songs will be performed by The Faith Quartet.

The program is free to attend and is being billed as something children will greatly enjoy.

For additional information, call (270) 928-4656.

Beshear ups wages for state employees

About 800 state workers in Kentucky will get a raise after Democratic Gov. Steve Beshear decided to increase the minimum wage to $10.10 per hour.

The increase affects only workers in the executive branch of state government and will cost taxpayers about $1.6 million. The current minimum wage is $7.25 per

Raising Old Glory

Mattoon Volunteer Fire Department hoisted a new flag Saturday above the fire station on Ky. 365 in preparation for Flag Day, which is Sunday. Fire department member Tommy Chandler said the flag was donated by Grant Rogers with the local Woodmen of the World office to replace an American flag that was becoming tattered. Chandler said the fire department wanted to have the new flag in place by Flag Day. hour. Tipped workers in state parks will be paid $4.90 per hour, up from the current $2.19 per hour. Private companies with state service contracts will have to pay its workers at least $10.10 per hour. But that won't take effect until the current contracts come up for renewal.

Beshear said about a third of the affected employees work in state nursing homes caring for military veterans. Most of the other affected workers work in behavioral health centers and state parks.

Ky. auto industry has $14.3 billion impact

Three manufacturers in Crittenden County are part of a $14.3 billion automotive industry in Kentucky.

A report released last week by University of Louisville Urban Studies Institute shows automotive producers and suppliers in the Bluegrass State support 136,500 jobs. Three of the suppliers are Par 4 Plastics, Tyler Manufacturing Co. and Harminie Enterprises in Marion.

Roughly $1 out of every $13 in the state's economy is tied to the auto industry.

"This vital industry includes regional parts suppliers, tool-and-die shops, warehouses, trucking companies and metal-stamping operations throughout the Commonwealth," Gov. Steve Beshear said.

The U of L study is the first comprehensive look at the widespread and growing impact the automotive industry is having on the state. It was commissioned by the Kentucky Automotive Industry Association (KIAA), formed last year to address the industry's challenges and opportunities for growth.

In KIAA's Owensboro-Henderson region, which includes Crittenden County, the automotive manufacturing industry contributed 3,644 jobs (direct, indirect and induced) for 2013, or 2.7 percent of automotive manufacturing's total for the state and 2.4 percent of the region's total employment.

Vandalism suspect had prior conviction

The man accused of twice painting gang-like symbols on public property at Marion-Crittenden County Park has a prior conviction for shoplifting at a Paducah Walmart.

Jason Isbell, 18, of Marion is charged with two counts of criminal mischief, each Class B felonies punishable by up to 90 days in jail and a $250 fine.

Police say Isbell confessed to painting symbols on various structures at the park this winter. After park crews cleaned up the original graffiti, Isbell is alleged to have gone back and repainted the symbols with the message "Not that Easy."

According to court records, Isbell was charged in April in McCracken County for shoplifting. He pleaded guilty and was given five days to serve and a two-year conditional discharge.

During arraignment last week on the criminal mischief charges in Crittenden District Court, Isbell pleaded not guilty and was appointed a public defender. Judge Daniel Heady ordered Isbell to stay out of the park while the case is pending.

Isbell's will next appear in court next Wednesday in Marion.

Relay for Life returns to local park

PHOTOS BY JASON TRAVIS, THE PRESS

Dozens of community members, including teams, businesses and schools, joined with cancer survivors and caregivers to celebrate life and come together Friday to find a cure in the battle against cancer at Crittenden County Relay for Life. The Relay, which raises money for the American Cancer Society, was held at Marion-Crittenden County Park for the first time since 2012. Natalie Parish, chairperson of the Relay, said the return to the park helped make the event a big success. This year's goal is $45,000. Parish said they raised $43,409 after expenses and will continue to accept donations through Aug. 31. Last year, more than $43,000 was raised locally, and since 1997, including what will be raised this year, more than $700,000 has been donated in Crittenden County to help fight the war on cancer. Above, local cancer survivors prepare for the Survivors Lap around the competition track. At left, Sandra Sills, a cancer survivor, receives a survivor's medal from Marion Mayor Mickey Alexander. All award winners will be announced in September at Relay's banquet. "The community came out to support us and we are very pleased with the outcome. Our teams went above and beyond with decorating their camp sites and we will be awarding them for their efforts in September. We thank our local businesses who sponsor Relay and the survivor brunch," Parish said. "On behalf of our Relay Committee we thank everyone who helped in any way to make Relay a huge success."

Lions Club car show brings crowds

The first-ever Bluegrass Blowout car show sponsored by Crittenden County Lions Club was a success according to organizer Kenny Perry. "It went a whole lot better than expected," said Perry, a Lions Club member and organizer of the event. Sixty-five vehicles, including some motorcycles, were registered for Saturday's show at the fairgrounds in Marion, but Perry said there were more participants than that, as some owners preferred not to register for prizes. "They just wanted to show off their cars," Perry said. There were 71 awards given. Planning is already under way for another show next year. Above, Mike Bryant of Webster County (left) and David Hoskins of Illinois look over a 1956 Chevy Bel-Air owned by Casper Hosick of Eddyville. "They don't make 'em like this anymore," said Hoskins, admiring some of the classic cars on display. Bryant, who works at Bumper to Bumper auto parts in Marion, and Hoskins are self-professed motorheads who have been friends since childhood in Illinois. "We've turned a lot of wrenches together," Bryant said. Both men were in town with their wives and made a day of it, also attending the Ben E. Clement Mineral Museum's Gem, Mineral, Fossil and Jewelry Show at Fohs Hall.

Thurmans touched lives beyond classroom

By JASON TRAVIS
STAFF WRITER

Jerry and Joyce Thurman were destined to serve their community and reach beyond its borders.

As long-time educators in Crittenden County, the Marion couple helped shape the lives of hundreds of students. And through various Christian ministries, they have touched the lives of strangers across the country.

A Crittenden County native, Jerry attended Bethel College in Hopkinsville, a Baptist college which has since closed. He later went on to attend Murray State University, where he received a master's degree in education and Rank 1 certification.

As an educator, his first day in the classroom was as a substitute teacher while still in college. In 1967, he officially began his career in education teaching a variety of courses in social studies at Crittenden County High School.

"My mother and my father were both teachers," he said. "That had a big influence on me."

Soon, Jerry felt a calling to teach beyond the classroom through preaching the word of God. So in 1973, he attended Clear Creek Bible College in Pineville, Ky. He soon became a bi-vocational pastor, and over the years, has ministered at various locations, including Dycusburg, East Barbourville, Cresswell, Old Salem, Caldwell Springs, Sulphur Springs and Marion Second Baptist churches.

Jerry returned to the Crittenden County School District in 1979, first teaching at the high school and then at the middle school. Having coached track and basketball for several years, he is known simply as "Coach" to many of his former students. He has fond memories teaching in Crittenden County and said he enjoyed interacting with the students and watching them grow as individuals and athletes.

In the late 1990s, Jerry moved from being in charge of a single classroom to taking charge of an entire school. His first move into administration was as principal of Crittenden County Middle School, where he served five years. He then transitioned to Union County and became principal at Sturgis Elementary School for three years before retiring in 2000.

While at Union County, Jerry said he had the privilege of helping establish high school classes at the Earle C. Clements Job Corps Center in Morganfield, where students had the option of getting their GED, or depending on their credits, earning their high school diploma. He was the first administrator for the Union County School District program.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed both working with my churches and kids at school at the same time. It was good," Jerry said, while also thanking his partner in life, his wife. "Joyce has been that helpmate that the Bible talks about. She's been there all the way."

The couple first met at Liberty Baptist Church in Lyon County, where Jerry's father was pastor.

Originally from Caldwell County, Joyce also attended Murray State University, where she received a bachelor's degree in both elementary and special education. She would go on to get her master's degree and Rank 1 certification in both fields of education at Murray.

Joyce also attended Union University in Barbourville, Ky., and Clear Creek Baptist School in Pineville, where she took courses in Bible studies.

While attending college in Murray and raising the couple's two children, Joyce was a substitute teacher in Crittenden County. Over six years, she taught classes ranging from first grade to high school.

Her career in education includes teaching at Dixon School for Exceptional Children in Webster County and Fohs Hall and Mattoon Elementary in Crittenden County. She later taught three years in the Knox County school system in eastern Kentucky.

When she and Jerry returned to Crittenden County, she taught at Frances Elementary for two years before moving to Crittenden County Elementary School. After retiring from there in 1999, she taught early childhood special education in Union County.

Joyce said working in eastern Kentucky had its challenges, as she had to teach from old textbooks from the 1950s. Classrooms were filled with students from different age groups. Yet, she still has fond memories from that time in her career and of the people in the communities.

"I learned as much as I taught," she said.

Throughout her career as a special education teacher, Joyce said she most enjoyed watching her students develop the necessary skills that enabled them to read.

She said teaching in Union County was a fitting way to end her career, as she taught special needs children that were severely disabled.

Retirement opened the door for the Thurmans to work full time helping those in need. They conducted mission work and volunteered with Kentucky Baptist Convention Disaster Relief, providing assistance in Mississippi and Alabama after Hurricane Katrina devastated those areas in 2005.

They have participated in clean-up efforts in a number of communities following damage from tornadoes, flooding and ice storms. On three occasions, they visited Owsley County, Ky., one of the poorest counties in the nation, serving meals and conducting Bible school. Jerry also had the opportunity to participate in mission work on a Native American reservation in Arizona.

The Thurmans also volunteered with a Kentucky Baptist program for youth who helped their community in rebuilding. They helped feed volunteer teenagers and counselors at a site in Russellville, Ky.

The couple, who have a son, daughter and three granddaughters, are in the middle of planning their next adventure. Their Marion home is for sale and in the fall, they will relocate to Bowling Green to be near their daughter. The move will allow them to spend more time with their grandchildren.

Looking back on their careers and the relationships they have built, the Thurmans said they appreciate the support from the parents of their Crittenden County students as well as members of the churches in which they have been associated.

(Editor's note: The Crittenden Press will throughout the year continue to bring you stories on many of Crittenden County's retired teachers.)

Golf scramble to benefit Fuller

STAFF REPORT

Individuals and local businesses are encouraged to hit the greens to help support a local family that has ties to both Crittenden and Livingston counties.

A golf scramble to benefit Mason Fuller, son of Brad and Jenny Fuller of Salem, will be held at 9 a.m., Aug. 1 at Deer Lakes Golf Course in Salem. The cost is $250 for a four-person team. It includes golf carts, mulligans, skirts and lunch. There is a $100 hole sponsorship for area businesses to help contribute toward the fund.

In January, Mason was diagnosed with NEMO immune deficiency, a genetic condition where the body doesn't produce enough protein to fight off infection. The diagnosis was made at Cincinnati Children's Hospital. The condition is so rare the hospital has treated only five patients who have had the immune deficiency.

The family was told the cure for NEMO is a bone marrow transplant. A donor was found earlier this spring in Brazil. According to Tolu native Brad Fuller, his son is expected to enter Cincinnati Children's Hospital on July 14 to begin prep work and chemotherapy treatment before receiving the bone marrow transplant. The transplant is expected to occur at the end of July.

Mason will have to stay in the hospital for at least two months after receiving the transplant. After which, doctors have said once Mason is released from the hospital he will have to stay in Cincinnati for another two to four months in order for doctors to monitor his immune system following the bone marrow transplant.

Communities in both Crittenden and Livingston counties have rallied around the family by offering their support in organizing a number of fundraisers to meet travel expenses. Individuals from other areas are also helping. An ATV fundraiser is scheduled to take place Saturday in Drakesboro.

To participate in the Deer Lakes golf scramble in Salem contact Emily Phillips at (270) 339-1642.

Summer meals provide youths 'rocket fuel'

Growing youths in Crittenden County need "rocket fuel" to keep their active bodies strong and healthy. Last Thursday, Crittenden County School District's summer food service program blasted off the launching pad, offering nutritious food to youngsters through June 30. The food program offers a free lunch for children up to age 18 on weekdays at both open sites and mobile locations designated throughout the county. At left, Dougie Smith, 8, receives a sack lunch from Janet Wright. He was one of 66 youths participating in the nutrition program during its first day. Flyers were sent home with students detailing the summer meal program and designated locations and times in which children can participate.

Local residents to perform in play this weekend at Fohs Hall

STAFF REPORT

Don't miss the chance to see local residents Ken Crider, Phyllis Sykes, Frank Pierce, B.J. Tinsley and Mike Crabtree acting on stage as the Fohs Hall Community Arts Foundation presents "Murder In The Magnolias" this Friday and Saturday.

Find out what roles Becky Tyner-Belt, Gaye

Porter, Karen Nasseri and Lynda Dennis are playing. Plus see the Fohs Hall play debut performances of Stephen Watson, David Combs, Brad Gilbert and Emily Combs.

The murder mystery unfolds when one character, Col. Rance Chickenwing dies, leaving the secret of his buried treasure for a houseful of demented relatives to discover.

Among those relatives include Bubba Kamrowski, who juggles bowling balls in a luncheonette; the delicate Blanche De Blank, whose fiancé drowned in the quarry behind the Veronica Lake Casino; Thornbird, the flaky poet, whose personality is split so many ways, he's fractured; the cartoonish Lawyer Possum, whose only paying client is an alligator. There's the movie queen, Princess Lotta Kargo, who claims she's the Colonel's wife. And then there's Amanda Chickenwing, who attempts to sell subscriptions to the Tudball Tattler.

Amidst the lunacy, another death occurs and the mystery at Belle Acres must be solved by Sheriff Billy Jerk. Toss in a prehistoric garden complete with murderous honeysuckle vines, yapping hound dogs, a Voodoo Woman, a menacing hurricane, a suspicious state engineer and a series of devastatingly hilarious "monologues" and this off-the-wall spoof is sure to delight audiences.

Friday night's mystery dinner theatre begins at 6:30 p.m., and is $25 per person. Saturday's mystery dessert theatre begins at 6:30 p.m., and is $17 per person.

Reservations are required. Contact Kim Vince at (270) 965-0243. Tickets will not be sold at the door.

Troop 30 stays active

STAFF REPORT

Boy Scout Troop 30 has been busy this spring preparing for camp later this month.

On May 30, Sandy Urbanowski, David Sizemore and several older scouts led training for adults and younger scouts. "We had a great fellowship while learning our outdoor leadership skills," said Michelle McKinney, the mother of Scout Travis McKinney, who is currently working on his project to become an Eagle Scout.

The Scout is building a new fossil display at the Ben E. Clement Mineral Museum in Marion. According to Michelle, the project is moving smoothly with the help of the Scout troop, along with museum curator Tina Walker, several board members and Tom Taylor, a friend of the McKinney family who has overseen and assisted with the carpentry.

Last month, Scouts participated in American Legion Post 111's Memorial Day ceremony. On Friday, they participated at Crittenden County Relay for Life. This week, nine scouts and five adults are preparing for camp. The group will be leaving Sunday for Camp BoxWell in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

"This is the first time in many years that the boys will attend an out-of-council camp," said McKinney, a Troop 30 committee member and Tecumseh District committee member.

Scoutmaster Clay Stevens will be at camp all week and the other four leaders will be helping part of the week to ensure that the Scouts have a great week of learning and fun.

Attending camp helps the Scouts earn badges quicker, bond with their other Scout friends and learn to survive without technology and modern conveniences while being away from home for a week.

"Troop 30 stays busy most of the year and welcomes any boy that's interested and volunteers to keep the tradition going," Michelle said.

Meanwhile, Cub Scouts are earning honors. On May 18, Paul Combs and Dylan Yates received their arrow of light award, which is highest award a Cub Scout can earn.

and county for this infrastructure project.

Johnson said traffic and fuel sales at the airport are increasing. It is used by local aircraft owners, corporate executives who fly in to take care of business in the area, pilots refueling their planes en route to other destinations, air medical units and even the military.

The airport receives hun-

"People up and down the street don't generally understand the value of the airport," Johnson said. "The government understands it, and that's why they throw so much money at general aviation."

Because of its viability, the general aviation classification of Marion-Crittenden County Airport was recently elevated by the FAA from basic, the lowest classification, to local.

"We're now rated higher than Princeton or Sturgis," Johnson said.

A paved runway extension to 5,000 feet is the next major upgrade eyed by the airport board. The current runway is 4,400 feet. The landing strip at the airport was initially turf, but it was reopened in 2006 with a paved runway, larger hangar and administration building. A weather station and jet fueling station have since been added.

Barkley Regional Airport Authority and Fulton Airport Board are the other two FAA grant recipients in the 1st Congressional District announced last week by Congressman Whitfield.

"From construction to completion, these projects will provide the opportunity for growth and development within these communities and benefit the surrounding areas as well," Whitfield said.

include Yeti coolers and cups made popular by the "Duck Dynasty" television series. Just in time for summer activities, whether on the ball diamond or the lake, Newcom said the coolers are designed to hold ice for seven days. The cups can hold ice for 24 hours.

Newcom enjoys talking with her customers and establishing a one-on-one relationship with them. She wants to know what other items customers are looking for when shopping local, as she wants to help fill that niche. She said it's important to shop local and added it benefits the whole community to have a variety of places in Marion in which to shop to attract more business into the city.

Newcom's store will be open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Derr's daughter, Delilah Coy of Indiana, Pa., was planning to visit her father along with her husband and children.

"They had been planning on coming down here to visit for a long time," said Ratley. "She was a teacher and just got out of school."

Ratley said Sunday morning worship at his church was surreal, with the church's leader suddenly gone. A memorial service was held at the church Monday for Derr and was attended by many of the pastor's out-of-state family.

Derr may be familiar to some around Marion. Ratley said his pastor was an avid golfer and spent many days on the links at Marion Country Club. He also enjoyed classic cars, according to Ratley.

Derr was apparently on his way home from visiting the Ratley family at the lakes when the wreck occurred.

Police have not determined what caused Derr to lose control of his car, but Ratley said the man was a severe diabetic and may have blacked out.

Very familiar with that stretch of roadway, traveling it every day from home to work and back, Ratley said that area is a heavy deer crossing. He speculated that a deer could have been the cause.

"I guess we'll never know, though," he said.

Authorities continuing search for elusive couple

STAFF REPORT

Law enforcement agencies from at least four counties continue to search for a couple wanted for questioning in regard to a string of burglaries.

Wanted are Christopher Adam Sheridan, 31, and Brooke Stevens, 34, both of Clay. Sheridan is wanted for a parole violation among other things. Stevens has an active warrant in Crittenden County for failure to appear in court to answer charges of burglary at Cave Springs Church.

Agencies in Crittenden, Caldwell, Webster and Hopkins counties have been following up on leads over the past week. Although there has been some illegal activity reported in Crittenden County over the past few days, none of it can be definitively attributed to Sheridan and/or Stevens. Anyone with information as to their whereabouts is urged to call (270) 965-3500 or 911.

Police have said they are to be considered armed and dangerous.

Avoid wildlife tampering

Encounters with young wildlife increase in spring as people spend more time outdoors. An unattended deer fawn curled up in tall grass. A litter of rabbits discovered alone in the backyard. A baby bird furiously flapping its wings but struggling to get off the ground. It's human nature to want to take matters into your own hands in such instances.

After all, we see and read stories about firefighters rescuing kittens from burning houses or technical rescue teams saving horses and livestock that have fallen into icy ponds. In nature, however, human intervention is not always what is best for wildlife.

"This is the time of year when white-tailed deer and other animals have their young," said Gabe Jenkins, deer and elk program coordinator with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "It's best to leave them alone."

John Zimmer, game foreman at Big Rivers WMA in Crittenden County, said he is receiving a number of calls about fawns.

"I have already had two fawns brought to my office that people have picked up in Crittenden County," said Zimmer. "This is an issue every year that we face. If the fawn is knowingly hurt or injured, then a person can call the rehabilitator to take the deer."

Otherwise, Zimmer and other wildlife officials say it is best to simply leave the wild animals alone.

The Information Center at Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's headquarters fields about 100,000 phone calls and upward of 40,000 emails from the public each year. Invariably, spring brings an influx of communications from well-intended people concerned about young wildlife seemingly abandoned by their parents. This coincides with the peak of deer fawning season. Newborn deer spend much of their time bedded down until they are about a month old and strong enough to follow their mother. Their reddish-brown coat patterned with pale spots helps camouflage them in dappled sunlight.

"Just like human babies, they're small, weak and need time to grow," Jenkins said. "They eat, they sleep and that's about it. The more they venture out and move around, the greater the chances are of them being preyed upon. Mom puts them in a spot or leaves them. The more she comes back and spends time there the more she brings her scent to that spot. The fawns are essentially scentless." The mother deer will visit her fawn to nurse and typically does not stray far from it between feedings. The separation may alarm somebody who discovers an unattended fawn but it helps divert predators' attention away from the baby deer.

Clement Mineral Museum show draws hundreds

PHOTOS BY DARYL K. Tabor, THE PRESS

The 10th annual Ben E. Clement Mineral Museum Gem, Mineral, Fossil and Jewelry Show drew hundreds of visitors to Fohs Hall over the weekend. Museum curator Tina Walker said as many as 700 people walked through the doors of the building Saturday and Sunday to peruse the wares that vendors offered. "They were coming in so fast, we couldn't get an accurate count," she said. Above, Debby Jarrett of Princeton (center) and Emily Henderson of Marion speak with vendor Frank E. Lavin of Schiller Park, Ill. Henderson, who just finished fourth-grade, said it was her first time to the show. "I like all the little rock formations and, especially, the jewelry," she said. It was also Jarrett's first trip to Fohs Hall for the two-day show. "I like anything rocks, stones and gems. You name it," she said. Lavin, who owns Lavin's Gems & Jewelry, is a regular at the show, which is probably the smallest of the 28 shows he visits each year. "We like the people here," he said. "We're happy as long as we don't lose money." And that wasn't happening this weekend. Lavin said Saturday that the items were flying off his vending tables. The museum also hosted day and night digs at former mining sites in the county.

Hall leaving local Extension Service to start path to becoming physician

By JASON TRAVIS
STAFF WRITER

Meredith Hall is about to embark on a new journey.

Since 2013, Hall has served as agriculture and natural resources agent for the University of Kentucky Crittenden County Cooperative Extension Service. Later this month, Hall will leave her position at the Extension Service to attend medical school in Louisville, where she will enter the physician assistant program at Sullivan University.

Hall, who has an undergraduate degree in agriculture from Western Kentucky University, has also taken pre-med courses. Starting June 29, she will train for two years in an accelerated year-round program.

Hall said she is drawn to the medical profession because it includes direct patient care and works to improve the quality of life of others. She sees parallels with her role as an agriculture Extension agent, where her chief role has been to help diagnose problems and work to help improve individuals' needs in agriculture and horticulture.

While she enjoys her position as an Extension Service agent, being accepted into medical school was an opportunity she felt she had to pursue.

Still, she hopes to stay involved in aspects of agriculture on some level.

She describes the two years as ag agent as having provided some of the best times of her life, and she values the relationships she's built in Crittenden County.

"I've learned that it's more important to show people how much you care before you show someone how much you know," Hall said. "That's something I'm taking from Extension and plan to use while I practice medicine."

As she prepares to head back to the classroom, Hall said she feels nervous, excited and ready to start.

One project she hopes will continue with the Extension Service has been the beekeeping club. A grant was recently obtained to purchase beekeeping equipment. Hall said she met with club members last week about ideas on keeping the club active until a new ag agent is hired to fill her role.

Hall's official last day on the job at the Extension Service is June 23.

Applications for the ag agent position for Crittenden County are now being taken.

Kentucky Supreme Court upholds ruling given by local judges in DUI-related case

STAFF REPORT

A Kentucky Supreme Court decision has reversed a Court of Appeals ruling and upheld lower court decisions by 5th Judicial District Court Judge Daniel Heady and 5th Judicial Circuit Court Judge Rene Williams.

Justice Bill Cunningham wrote the Supreme Court's decision last month that affirmed rulings by the two judges, who preside over Crittenden, Webster and Union counties.

The case was Duncan vs. Commonwealth and it originated in Webster District Court after a Providence police sergeant arrested Christopher Duncan on a DUI charge. The suspect was asked to give a blood sample to test his blood-alcohol content. He denied the officer's request, instead, consented to a breathalyzer test. The officer, Brent McDowell - who is now Providence's police chief - invoked Kentucky's implied consent law and took Duncan to jail on a charge of third-offense DUI.

Duncan, represented in court by attorney Amelia Zachary, filed for a dismissal based upon the officer's refusal to give him a breathalyzer test first. The motion was denied by Judge Heady in Webster District Court.

Duncan appealed to Circuit Court where Judge Williams affirmed Judge Heady's decision.

Duncan subsequently applied for discretionary review by the Court of Appeals and it reversed the two lower court decisions based upon what appears to be a misapplication of a previous legal precedent.

In short, the Supreme Court of Kentucky wrote in its options, which is to be published, that based upon state law, police officers may request blood, breath or urine tests for those believed to be driving drunk, or any combination of the three, and in no particular order.

The Supreme Court's decision is already being used by traffic safety training for police officers and prosecutors in Kentucky.
